He is confident that the Board members, President Hsu and his administration will do all they can to address the points made in the Self-Evaluation Survey Report.

“As we have enjoyed approximately six Board meetings with the current committee assignments and committee meeting structure, a number of you have recommended that we may have an opportunity now to reflect on our current committee assignments and structure and consider other possible ideas.

To that end, I will be asking David McNair to solicit input from each of you around committee issues and new committee assignments will not be made until after the January Board meeting to ensure Board members have time to give their feedback before new committee assignments and possible adjusted committee structure at the April Board meeting.”

Congratulations, President Hsu, for this recognition.”

Alumni Association Board President; Charleston Athletic Fund Director; and Foundation Board Chair Reports
Chair Hay welcomed the new President of the Alumni Association and new Chair of the Foundation Board, Derrick Williams and Peggy Boykin, via Zoom, who delivered a report from their respective Board.

John Douglass, Chair of the Charleston Athletic Fund, could not be with us this morning as he and his wife are expecting the birth of their third child, a baby girl. Therefore, Jerry Baker, Director of the Charleston Athletic Fund, delivered a report from their Board.

Election of Board Officers:
Chair Hay announced that we will now have the election of Board Officers. Our election process will proceed in accordance with our Board of Trustees’ Bylaws 30-year history, the Freedom of Information Act, and State Law.

Trustee Steve Swanson, Member of the Audit and Governance Committee, informed the Board that the only nomination received for Chair of the Board is Trustee David Hay; the only nomination received for Vice Chair of the Board is Trustee Demetria Clemons; and the only nomination received for Secretary of the Board is Trustee Renée Romberger. Nominations for the three officers were closed effective with the adjournment of the August Board meeting.

In keeping with the requirements provided in our Bylaws, although we have only one person nominated for each office, we will provide a ballot with David Hay’s name for office of Board Chair, a ballot with Demetria Clemons’ name for Vice Chair, and a ballot with Renée Romberger’s name for Secretary of the Board.

Elizabeth Kassebaum and Angela Mulholland distributed the ballots and Board members were asked to check their ballots and return them to Elizabeth or Angela.

Trustee Swanson confirmed that the Board Officers will be David Hay, Chair; Demetria Clemons, Vice Chair; and Renée Romberger, Secretary, and thanked all Board members who participated in this important process.

Also, Trustee Swanson announced that no nominations for Trustee Emeritus were received. However, upon retirement from the Board of Trustees on September 23, 2020, Cherry Daniel, with 24 years of service, declared herself “Trustee Emeritus” in accordance with the Bylaws.

Chair Hay thanked everyone for their support and noted that he looked forward to serving again as Chair of the Board of Trustees and asked Vice Chair Clemons and Secretary Romberger if they would like to share any remarks with the Board.

Vice Chair Clemons responded by saying “Thank you, Chair Hay. And thank you fellow Board members for allowing me the honor to serve as Vice Chair again. Here we are in 2020, and as we move forward in these challenging times, we should think about the transfer of power when the College of Charleston became a State Board in 1970. I would like to share a few passages from ‘Quantum Leap: A Story of Three Colleges’ by James A. Rogers and Dolores J. Miller, noting that at on July 1, 1970, this was a moving moment in College of Charleston history. In a city where history is revered, the 12th oldest college in the United States had closed its door upon 200 years of history as a private institution and was entering upon a new future whose promise then could only be imagined. With the other fifteen members of the State College Board seated before him and introduced by him for the first time to a public audience, Board Chairman Rogers, speaking on behalf of the State and the State College Board, sought to capture the mood of the moment in history:

‘As trustees,’ he said, ‘we are mindful of the great history of this institution; of the cherished role it has played in the educational and cultural life of this historic city.

To all who have shared in its 200 years of history, the words of John Ruskin apply. “When we build,” he once wrote, “let us think we build forever. Let it not be for present delight nor present use only. Let it be such as our descendants will thank us for; and let us think as we lay stone upon stone, that the time will come when these stones will be held sacred because our hands have touched them, and that men will say as they look upon the wrought substance of them, See! This our fathers did for us.”

Board Chairman Rogers continued, ‘There will be new stones and new buildings, and new dimensions added to these and future years. Together, we shall seek to preserve the best of everything that is honored in College of Charleston history, and, at the same time, be understanding and creative enough to be sensitive and responsive to new times and changing educational demands. In this spirit, we accept … the responsibility to which we have fallen heir. We will seek to be guardians of its operations, and leaders capable of discerning the new potential for greatness in the years that lie ahead.”

Vice Chair Clemons thanked her fellow Board members and Chair Hay turned it over to Secretary Romberger for her remarks.

Secretary Romberger responded by saying “Vice Chair Clemons is a tough act to follow, but I would like to state that I consider it a privilege and honor to serve in the role of Secretary of the Board of Trustees and thank you for the trust you placed in me. Please know that any Trustee is welcome to contact me at any time.”

Education Advisory Board (EAB) Governance Presentation

Chair Hay welcomed Matt Pellish, Managing Director of Strategic Research and Education at the Education Advisory Board (EAB), who, via Zoom, presented a Power Point regarding fiduciary roles in the public university and how it relates to strategic planning.

Chair Hay noted that, due to time constraints, if the Board of Trustees have any questions for Matt, please send them to him in writing, and he will get them to Matt for answers.

President’s Report

“I want to begin my remarks by expressing my gratitude to everyone on the Board of Trustees.

Two years ago, at about this exact same time in October, I was simply one out of many very qualified and very talented candidates vying for the top position at a top university.

I want to again thank the Board of Trustees for seeing my potential and for giving me the opportunity to lead your beloved Alma Mater.

Since first stepping foot on campus, I, too, have seen a lot of potential. The College of Charleston already does so many great things. And, in some cases, it does great things despite a lack of resources.

Why? It does these great things because it has great people.

Like you saw firsthand last night in biology professor Matt Rutter’s presentation on the Asian Longhorned Beetle, we have incredibly talented people working on the national scene. Like Matt, our people are smart … they are passionate … they are caring.

And, so many times, they do a lot with only a little.

I truly believe, with the right catalyst in the right places, we can take their work to even greater heights.

Before I talk about how we might reach those new heights together, I would like to speak briefly about our response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

As you well know, this pandemic is brutal. Our team has done an incredible job in facing this crisis.

The tough measures we have put into place are working. And this is exactly the time NOT to let down our guard.

Let me show you our latest COVID-19 dashboard.

As you can see, right now, our positive cases are relatively low. We must hang on and persevere.

I want to especially recognize the leadership of Alicia Caudill, our executive vice president of student affairs, and her entire team for their exceptional work. Our student affairs staff, along with Campus Housing and Campus Dining Services, have been on the frontlines of supporting our students … and they have done a wonderful job. Alicia is the true definition of a servant leader. She is tireless in her service to our students. She truly leads by example – and that is why her team is so strong. And that is why our response this fall has worked.
Please join me in a round of applause for Alicia, our Student Affairs staff and our entire campus for their hard work and for their exceptional care of our students.

Our strategic plan could not be coming at a better time.

We now have a shared game plan and a shared vision that the entire campus community can rally around.

Now, we just need to start moving that way.

As you heard in yesterday’s reporting, our deans and senior leadership team have defined three Wildly Important Goals, or WIGs, for Year One in our implementation of the strategic plan.

These goals lay the groundwork for everything that is to come.

One of the cross-cutting themes of our strategic plan is diversity, equity and inclusion, and all of our priorities in Year One will work to address it.

When we talk about diversity, equity and inclusion, or DEI, for short, it needs to be more than just that – talk.

As you heard from Vice President Renard Harris yesterday, this is a Year of Action. He and his team, collaborating in conjunction with every division across campus, are working to implement a wide range of DEI strategies.

I won’t repeat all those initiatives now, but they cover a wide range of the campus experience, from education and training, to scholarships and recruitment.

As many of you know, this campus has worked and continues to work to address its troubling history with race.

Just as this country is struggling to come to terms with its past … so, too, is the College of Charleston.

Racial injustice is interwoven into our past, but it doesn’t have to define us now.

Wisely, the College of Charleston was intentional in making its 250th an opportunity to be honest … so that we may tell a fuller story and, therefore, move beyond it.

The College has taken many steps to cure our collective amnesia.

How?

We do that by erecting interpretative signage to provide context, and we also do that by sharing our story, through research and by putting that research in print and online.

We learn from the past so that we don’t repeat it.
I know the changing of names is controversial. Not just here, but everywhere.

For some, a change of names is a betrayal of the past. For others, it’s a too-small, too-late gesture.

You might even ask … does changing a name actual do anything? It’s a valid question.

I think, in some cases, it certainly does.

I applaud the Board of Trustees for establishing a taskforce yesterday out of the Audit and Governance Committee so that they may properly review the Board’s bylaws on naming, especially as it relates to the names of buildings and schools.

While their important work is being done, the College’s administration can take action now in other areas and in other ways.

I am proud to say that the College’s leadership team hears our campus community’s call for reconciliation. And we strongly want to take steps to make the campus more welcoming and inclusive, especially for African Americans, a group historically disadvantaged or outright excluded at our college, in our city and in our state.

To make progress toward greater reconciliation, we will remove the name of William Aiken, a prominent slaveholder, from use in the Honors College and rename our top scholars, Charleston Scholars.

And we will also drop the use of the name of our first president, who used his own enslaved labor on our campus and whose estate later derived financial gain from that use of enslaved labor on campus.

Those names, unfortunately, are not reflective of who we are today and are not appropriate for our most prestigious scholars, philanthropic society nor our top student award.

It is true that both were men of their time, but they both actively worked … either through their influence in government or in the church … to perpetuate a culture in which one group of people subjugated another.

Let me be clear: the changing of names is not a solution in and of itself to our institution’s need for reconciliation. Far from it.

The changing of names is a gesture, but, still, I think it is an important one. I hope it will send a message to the world that things are changing.

As an institution, we need to do many things and we will.

We will raise and provide more financial resources to our under-represented, minority students.

We will produce more programming that will appeal to students of color.
We will continue to create a culture where people of color feel respected and at home here, whether they are a student, a faculty member or a staff member.

Through our shared work in the strategic plan, we will strive for diversity, equity and inclusion in everything we do.

In closing, I want to go back to what I said at the beginning: We are a great university because our people are great.

Last weekend, that was in full display during our rescheduled Class of 2020 commencement ceremony.

Even with a few bumps in the road due to technology and Mother Nature, the day was a triumph. It was a moment for those graduates who were able to participate in person in which the College showed how it cared.

I encourage you to go on our social media accounts and The College Today and just look at some of the images and videos – the faces of those graduates crossing the Cistern will remind you why we do what we do.

That moment was the result of hours of planning by a very dedicated group of faculty and staff. But that moment also stretches back years and was also the result of countless faculty and staff members encouraging those students along their academic journey – pushing, pulling and helping them to complete their degrees.

We are great because of our people.

Our people are what set us apart.

Our people are our greatest tradition and our people will be the power behind our transformation. Thank you.”
